Joyce Mortorano has been training in classical ballet, tap, jazz, and various other dance styles for more than 30 years. She began teaching and sharing her love of dance with her students in the summer of 2000. Since that time she has taught in traditional dance studios, high schools, daycares, and after school programs. Joyce also has a college degree in Early Childhood Education, experience as a head teacher in Preschool classrooms, and experience as the manager of a corporate nursery.

Joyce is passionate about teaching dance because it combines her two greatest loves, dance and children, and allows her to share the joy she has experienced through dance with others. She hopes to instill in her students a foundation and a love of dance that they can grow on throughout their entire lives.
